

Cook and the Star.

The Kansas City Star is now trying, as gracefully and as skillfully as it can, to wriggle out of the charges which it made against Hon. Sam B. Cook, in connection with the failure of the Salmon Bank.

The Star got a notion that in this big failure, it could manufacture some ammunition against its ancient enemy, the "Democratic machine."

It now finds that the full force of its volleys landed in the abdomen of a certain Mr. Cook, who by the grace of the recent landslide, is one of Missouri's Republican bank examiners.

All efforts to compromise the honesty or ability of the distinguished ex-Secretary of State have fallen very flat.

The great majority of fighting Democrats throughout the State still cherish a warm regard for him, and they are impatient for the day to come when they can do something to prove to him their loyalty and fidelity.—Lamar Democrat.

Acute Rheumatism.

Deep tearing or wrenching pains, occasioned by getting wet through; worse when at rest, or on first moving the limbs and in cold or damp weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's Snow Liniment. Oscar Oleson, Gibson City, Illinois, writes, Feb. 16, 1902: "A year ago I was troubled with a pain in my back. It soon got so bad I could not bend over. One bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment cured me." 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by Arcadia Valley Drug Co.

Oregonian Sensitiveness.

People who are planning a visit to the Portland Exposition should learn how to pronounce the name of the river that flows through the Fair City. Oregonians are touchy on the subject.

A lady wrote an ode to celebrate the opening. She was a New England poetess and not up on Oregonian orthoepy:

"When Clark and Lewis first beheld

The rippling Williamette

The virgin forest round them lay,

With many a snare beset."

The Portland Oregonian resented the error in some verses closing thus:

"But, indeed, ma'am,

When we find our bright Williamette

Mispronounced, we feel you need, ma'am,

To be told it rhymes with —."

The sensitive nature of the Oregonian should be respected. Besides, there is a nemonic merit in the lesson. Should you, in the presence of an Oregonian, not mispronounce, but commit the worse offense of forgetting the name of their much-loved river, just think of what you said (or, if you are a woman, of what you heard your husband or brother say) when you hit your thumb instead of the tack.—Post-Dispatch.

The Air Is Conquered.

Roy Knabenshue, in his Toledo flight in an airship, has demonstrated that the long-dreamed-of navigation of the air is to some degree at least practicable.

His is the first flight ever made that may be called successful. He sailed three miles against a strong wind, with his machine always under perfect control, landed where he had previously announced that he would land, and then made the return journey to exactly the same spot from which he had started.

The essential requirements of aerial navigation have been met. Correct principles have been discovered and properly applied. But a host of difficulties will develop and must be overcome. One swallow does not make a summer; nor does one successful flight fill the sky with airships. The automobile was an accomplished mechanical fact long years before it was made practicable for general use. So was the steam engine and every other mechanical innovation.

The popular mind requires development quite as much as an invention. A long campaign of education through advertising was necessary to make even so simple a thing as the bicycle popular. Far more than that will be required to induce the public to take to the air, even though airships be made perfectly safe.—Kansas City World.
